

Chuck is a seasoned technology leader, serial entrepreneur, and investor with more than 40 years of experience founding, scaling, exiting technology ventures. He began his career at Apple Computer in the early 1980's, where he spent a decade during a formative period in the company's growth.

Over the course of his career, Chuck has launched multiple innovative companies, including a digital stock trading platform acquired by Reuters and a document management solution for large legal firms, which was acquired in 2010. Most recently, he sold his cloud services firm to one of the nation's leading managed service providers.

Following that exit, Chuck joined the Howard County Economic Development Authority, where he led the creation and launch of the Maryland Innovation Center—now a premier hub supporting startups and entrepreneurial growth in the region. He most recently formed LBK Partners, LLC, an advisory consulting firm helping companies accelerate and navigate sustainable growth. Chuck is a past two-term Chair of the Howard Technology Council and has served on the boards of the Downtown Columbia Partnership, the Maryland Business Innovation Association, and the Maryland Small Business Development Center.
